During the discussions of the Working Group, several delegations reiterated their views expressed during the plenary debate, highlighting substantive concerns with certain provisions of the articles on diplomatic protection, while other delegations spoke in favour of the eventual adoption of the articles as a convention. The continued solicitation of views from Governments on the articles on diplomatic protection was welcomed as a useful exercise. At the same time, it was observed that more time was needed for State practice to develop before any action could be taken on the articles. Moreover, attention was drawn to the ongoing consideration of the fate of the articles on State responsibility.

A number of suggestions were made for the Sixth Committee to
